THEY DID NOT FIGHT.

Last June Mr. Augustine Jacquelin Smith, of New York, son of the late Mr. Augustine C. Smith, of Winchester, was at the University of Virginia as the representative of Mr. C. B. Rouss at the dedication of the Rouss physical labratory, which the blind millionaire founded. While in Charlottesville Mr. Smith met a lady, descended from William C. Rives and bearing his name, and related how his father and the statesman had once appeared on the field of honor as morta antagonists. Recently Mr. Smith has written an account of this affair, from which the following is taken: "My father when at William and Mary College in 1808 had as classmates John Tyler, afterwards President of the United States; William C. Rives. afterwards United States Senator and minister to France, and Abel P. Up-shur, afterwards Secretary of State un-der Mr. Tyler. They were like brothers. But one day in a heated dis cussion between them, the purport of which I never learned learned. words of a not very amiable na ure were exchanged between young Rives and my father, and they went out upon the field designated by the code where wounded honor was to be vindicated. North Carolina was selected as the place where the battle would take place, and to that State the combatants quickly repaired. A venerable-looking, gray-haired old gentlement in the respherence of the spot man in the neighborhood of the spot chosen for the contest had been told of the suspicious assemblage, and he has tened to the scene. He reached the ground just as the principals had tak-en their positions for hostile action. He pleaded for a hearing. He told of his own experience of a similar nature—of his baying killed a dear friend on He pleaded for a hearing. He told of his own experience of a similar nature of his baying killed a dear friend on the field of honor for a trifling matter that might have been so easily settled but for false pride. He told of his uchappiness since, and of the never ceasing the similar that might have been so easily settled but for false pride. He told of his uchappiness since, and of the never ceasing the similar that his services would not be required any more.

Mr. Ryan charges that his services would not be required any more. happiness since, and of the never ceasing remembrance of the sad event and of the scene upon the field when the mortal wound had sent into eternity a the misery that came to more household because a dear one had been siain. As he told all this the tears rolled down the furrows of his kind-hearted but sad ince. The effect may be imagined. Each face was moistened with the tears that could not be repressed. His story was the counterpart of the case which had brought the two young men hefore him who were then facing each other in hos-tile attitude. They all recognized this fact and a halt was called. A reconcil iation took place, and both principals lived many years afterwards to serve their country with distinction—Mr Rives to become one of the most distinguished men of his time in the civil department of the republic, and my father to serve his country and State in both the military and civil service, as a col onel for years in the regular army, and after his resignation in order to return to the bar, which he preferred, to serve with distinction in the Senate of his na-

SUED THE DOCTOR. Dr. Michael B. Feeney, prominent in politics and chief inspector of the division of general and special sanitary inspection of the Borough of Manhattan, is being sued in the Supreme Court by James J. Ryan, a pawnbroker, who demands $50,000 for the alienation of the affections of his wife, Juliette Ryan. When the case came before Judge Beach and a jury on Monday it was put off indefinitely because Mr. Ryan had no direct proof of his marriage other than his own testimony, and under a ruling of the Court of Appeals a bus band or wife in an action of this character is not competent to testify as to the marriage. The marriage certificate was even offered in evidence as proof of the marriage, but rejected on the ground that it was presumptive evi-dence and not the best that could be produced. Dr. Feeney and Mr. Ryan had long been friends. The physician had known Mrs. Ryan before her marriage and subsequently attended her profession-ally. Mr. Ryan charges that in October, 1893, the affections of his wife were alienated by the physician, who enticed her from her home. She, it is charged, was found in Dr. Feeney's house, and refused to comply with her hus-band's entreaties and return to her home. DRYING PREPARATIONS simply develop dry catairh; they dry up the secretious which adhere to the membrane and de-compose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh.
